

MEETING OF COUNCIL

The Borough Managers Meet in Regular Session.

TO BUILD NEW SEWERS

On Allegheny, Howard and Bishop Streets—The Business Transacted Was of a Quiet Nature.

PRUNER ORPHANAGE NOT MENTIONED

The regular semi-monthly session of council was held Monday evening at 7:30 with President Keller in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Beezer, Brown, Judge, Hamilton and Wagner.

Rev. James P. Hughes asked council to take some action in regard to the bad side walk on Bishop street in front of the Lieb property. Referred to street committee.

The street committee reported resurfacing pavements on Corbin street. Work on Linn street progressing.

The fire and police committee reported receiving the rent for the Urdine building.

The Market committee reported receiving $4.00 from the curb market.

The finance committee reported that the assessed valuation of the borough for taxation was $1,626,436. This netted for taxes the following $21,149.84.

The ordinance for the building of new sewers on Allegheny, Howard and Bishop was passed by council.

Dr. Kirk voted against the Allegheny street sewer because he did not think it would be a success. The ordinance was passed by a vote of 5 to 1. He also voted against the Howard street sewer for similar reasons. Property owners on Bishop and Howard will be assessed 20 cents per front foot and on Allegheny street 25 cents per front foot.

Mr. Hamilton presented a petition which he desired presented to the State Highway commission asking for a State road from the northern boundary line of the borough, in Linn street, down Allegheny to Bishop and out East Bishop street to Borough line. The road will be twenty feet wide. This state road now being built from Bellefonte to Milesburg. It is estimated that the road would cost $8,000 of which the borough would only pay $1000.

Col. Spangler addressed council in behalf of the proposed resolution for a State road and urge them to avail themselves of this opportunity to get good roads. He said small towns in Cambria county not 15 years old had already secured State roads and were getting good roads.

The resolution asking State aid passed council unanimously and will first be presented to the County Commissioners for their approval before presenting to the State Highway Commission.

Action on the veto by the Burgess of Pruner Orphanage was postponed until the next meeting night, there not being a full board present.

Death of Small Child.

Monday morning at 7 o'clock the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krebs of Willowbank street passed away. The child was just a year old and had an attack of whooping cough, at times he was a good bit better and then he would grow worse. On Sunday evening he had convulsions and never regained consciousness. Mr. Krebs is employed at Burnham at the Standard Steel Works.

"GALLANT FIFTH" AND ITS COLONEL.

Regiment is Flower of the Guard—Commander Tireless Worker.

The "Gallant Fifth"—the flower of the National Guard regiments of central and western Pennsylvania—the pride and inspiration of every faithful and loyal officer and private who have labored zealously and successfully to place it at the head of the Second brigade is commanded by Col. Hugh S. Taylor of Bellefonte.

Is it any cause for surprise that his regiment, which commands the never-tiring attention, should have such prominence when the character of this young commander is analyzed and thoughtfully considered?

Starting in life with the humblest surroundings, "Hughy" Taylor as he was familiarly known, possessed of strong intelligence, sound body and a noble ambition to reach the very highest rung possible in the ladder of success, by reason of his remarkable energy and grit and his absolute fearlessness in the face of the many obstacles that beset a young man of his circumstances, has surmounted one difficulty after another in a manner that is as commendable as it is remarkable. He acquired his foundation education in the Bellefonte public schools and at State College; later on, after hard and faithful study he was admitted with flying colors to the Centre county bar, was twice elected to fill the important position of tax collector, served as county chairman of the Democratic committee for two or three terms and was called to the office of sheriff of Centre county—all of which positions he filled with honor and credit to all concerned. He is now attending strictly to his legal duties and with prosperous success. While performing these various civic duties, he has maintained an intense interest in military affairs.

A born soldier to begin with, he enlisted as a private in the National Guard in the summer of 1886. His sterling military qualities soon revealed its self in its fine soldierly bearing—no matter what his duty or task—and quickly did he receive promotions through the several positions of corporal, sergeant and lieutenant. Then when the opportunity came, this born leader of men was made captain of Company B of his home town of Bellefonte. He immediately intoned his own spirit into his men and brought his company to the head of the regiment, then to the head of the brigade and at last this company led the division. His qualifications as a soldier now become more apparent than ever and when the opportunity offered itself the officers in recognition of his merit, crowned him colonel of the Fifth regiment, which position he holds today with proud distinction.

What the future has in store for him who can tell? Isn't it significant that Bellefonte has had two colonels who rose to the governorship—Beaver and Hastings? Might it not be some day "Governor Hugh S. Taylor?" His ability, energy and popularity generally are to the highest positions in life. Congratulations and success to you, Colonel Taylor.—Attona Times.

Relining the Bellefonte Furnace.

On Wednesday of last week the Bellefonte furnace was blown out for the purpose of relining the stack. As soon as it was cool enough a big force of men were put to work tearing out the old lining and by Tuesday of this week they had completed the job and the bricklayers began laying the brick for the new lining. It will take about one month to complete all the repairs needed and get everything in shape to put the furnace again in blast. In the meantime all the workmen will be given steady employment so that the brief close down will not affect any of them.

This is the first time the furnace has been relined since it was blown in on October 20th, 1904, a run of two years and nine months, and in that time in the neighborhood of one hundred and fifty thousand tons of pig iron have been cast.

Rev. Dr. Ganoe Resigns.

Because of ill health Rev. Dr. M. L. Ganoe, pastor of the first Methodist church of Bloomsburg, and one of the most prominent ministers in the Central Pennsylvania Conference, has resigned.

His health is such that it is unlikely that he will again resume active pastoral relations with any church in the conference. Dr. Ganoe went to Bloomsburg in the Spring of 1905 from the First Methodist church, of York. Dr. Ganoe is well known in Bellefonte.

WILLIAMSPORT DOCTORS

Have Raised the Price of Medical Attendance

THE PEOPLE ARE ANGRY

And Threaten to Boycott the City Medical Association—The Following Article Appeared in the City News.

THE DOCTORS WILL LIKELY RECONSIDER

Now that the physicians of Williamsport have had an opportunity to discover in what spirit their announcement of an increase of fees has been received by the public they may be prevailed upon to reconsider their action.

It is not denied that a good physician is entitled to fair pay for the services he performs, but it is also true that there are some physicians who are not entitled to as much pay as others receive.

The skilled physician will have no difficulty in demanding and receiving such fees as he may regard as his due for the character of the work he performs, for the people who desire to employ a physician of experience and skill will not hesitate to pay what he demands.

But it is a hardship to ask the people to pay the same fee to an unskilled physician that they would pay to a skilled physician.

There is one feature of this determination of the physicians to increase their fees which they ought to consider most carefully.

The medical profession is one of the most dignified in existence.

Are the physicians of Williamsport aware that they are lowering the dignity of the profession by entering into a combination which the public will believe is based on sordid monetary considerations? Is not the formation of this doctor's trust a confession on the part of the physicians that they desire to make more money and that the humane feature of the profession has been lost sight of?

The proficient physician who has built up a remunerative practice and who can afford to charge what he pleases is placed on a level with the young physician who has just started on his career, and this is unjust to the public.

The danger to the medical profession in this city from the formation of this trust will be apparent if the people shall also continue to invite to Williamsport outside physicians who shall not bind themselves to follow in the footsteps of the trust.

In time a new set of physicians will have been established in this city and the injury to the public to the local physicians would be incalculable.

Williamsport has a number of physicians whom she would regret to see suffer from such a boycott as that which is proposed to be inaugurated in the western part of the city, but if the local physicians shall continue to make their fees almost prohibitive there is no doubt that outside physicians will be prevailed upon to locate here in numbers large enough to prove injurious to the local medical men.

The public will stand much, but it will not submit to a sudden raise of from fifty to one hundred per cent. in the fees it pays the physicians.

For this reason it would be well for the physicians of the city to reconsider their action.

There is also an element of danger to the public in the high fees charged by the physicians.

Families will be slow to call in a physician when sickness attacks one of their number, especially at night when the fees are doubled.

Delays are dangerous and procrastination in this respect may seriously affect the death rate in this city.

The poor man whose child takes sick in the night will be likely to wait until morning before calling a doctor, because it will cost him twice as much to have a physician visit his home at night as it will in the morning, and the delay may result in giving the disease such a start that no medical skill will avail to bring about a cure.

Many families will undoubtedly neglect to call a physician even in the daytime because of the higher fees, and this will have its effect on the health of the city.

GREAT DAY AT LAKEMONT.

Thousands of Methodists Enjoy Pleasures of Annual Outing.

Methodist day at Lakemont park on Thursday was a grand success. The weather was such as could only be had in answer to prayer. It was ideal. Each succeeding year the reunions have been more successful than the preceding ones, but the reunion held Thursday eclipsed all former ones, for the elaborateness of the manner in which the day was spent at the resort. The Methodists worked diligently for a successful time at the tenth annual reunion and their efforts were crowned with success. Probably 15000 people were present.

Rev. Dr. R. H. Gilbert, presiding elder of Danville district, was in charge of the first meeting of the day. The service opened with the hearty singing of the Coronation hymn by the audience. Rev. Dr. G. M. Klepfer, of Eighth Avenue church, read the Beatitudes as a Scripture lesson. A fervent prayer was offered by Rev. E. M. Stevens, presiding elder of the Harrisburg district. After singing, Dr. Gilbert introduced Bishop Luther B. Wilson, D. D., LL. D., of Chattanooga, Tenn. He announced as his text James 1:11. His theme was "Elijah, Subject to Like Passions as We Are." His sermon was a splendid, simple strong and spiritual one and he commanded the attention of the large number of people.

Rev. B. C. Conner, presiding elder of the Altoona district, presided at the afternoon session and Rev. S. D. Wilson, of Phillipsburg, offered the prayer, followed by a solo by Walter McEldowney. The chorus rendered "Thine is the Kingdom." The address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. Homer C. Stuntz, D. D., New York, late superintendent Methodist missions in the Philippines Islands. The address was one of the best ever heard at a gathering of that kind and many interesting statistics relative to Methodist mission work were related to the many hundreds present.

The evening exercises were presided over by Rev. J. S. Wilcox, presiding elder of the Williamsport district. Thirty minutes of song service was indulged in, followed by an anthem, "Jubilate Deo," by Mrs. Ashford. W. L. Sanderson of Juniata, rendered a solo, and the chorus rendered "Great and Marvelous." The prayer of Rev. D. G. Downey, D. D., now assistant secretary of the united boards of education, with headquarters at Cincinnati, O. His theme was, "Essential Christianity," and he being a vigorous thinker, eloquent and with a wide vein of wit, the hour of his address was filled with interest.

HENRY GORDEN PASSED AWAY.

He Served his Country Faithfully as a Soldier.

On Monday evening at 11:40 the angel of death called away the life of Henry Gordon and old and respected citizen of Spring township.

Henry Gordon answered the call in the dark days of the Rebellion and with many others went to the front to fight for his country. His service as a soldier in those days when it meant something to be a soldier were commendable. He was wounded several times and when the war was over he came back home broken down in health. He was a member of the 77th Pa. Volunteer Infantry.

Henry Gordon was born in Berks county and was 72 years 2 months and 26 days old. He leaves to mourn his death a wife and three sons, Elmer, John and Ben.

The funeral occurred on Thursday morning. Services were held in the Union Chapel at Pleasant View and interment made in the Union cemetery Bellefonte. He was buried with honors of war by Gregg Post 95, of which organization he was a member. Rev. W. H. Spangler of the United Brethren church had charge of the services.

Lewistown Banker Dead.

William Irwin, cashier of the Millin County National Bank, at Lewistown, for the past twelve years, suddenly died of paralysis Wednesday morning. For thirty seven years he has been in the employ of the National bank of which he was cashier when he died. He was also treasurer of the Lewistown and Reedsville Electric Railway company, the Lewistown Standard Building and Loan association, the Henderson Fire Company, The Firemen's Relief association and of the three Masonic associations located at Lewistown. He was very widely known and much respected. His funeral occurred Friday.

FAST TRAIN SIDESWIPED

By Gondola Loaded With Coal WENT OVER SWITCH

And Was Struck by Express Which was Going Sixty Miles an Hour

ACCIDENT WAS NEAR A CURVE

Pittsburg, August 7.—Four persons were killed and twenty-two injured in a railroad wreck on the Buffalo and Allegheny division of the Pennsylvania railroad at Kelley, about thirty-five miles from this city. The wrecked train was the Titusville express, No. 76, which left Titusville, Pa., for this city at 7:10 Tuesday morning. At 11:30, while passing through Kelly, the train was sideswiped by a gondola coal car and the engine, tender, baggage and express cars with the three day coaches were derailed.

The gondola car was loaded with coal and had broken away from a train and rolled down over a switch extending over onto the main track. The passenger train, running at about sixty miles an hour, came round a curve and before the speed could be reduced had struck the gondola. The engine was thrown about thirty feet from the track and landed on its side. Engineer Irwin was caught beneath his engine. The tender was likewise turned over and the cars broken and battered, were strewn along the tracks on their sides. Most of the injured were in the second day coach. The majority of these were cut by glass and received bruises in falling over the cars. When the heavily loaded gondola car struck the engine it scraped the rails and upon coming in contact with the first car, the entire roof was ripped off. The car tipped towards the bank of the Allegheny river and the occupants, who were mostly men and boys, rolled out of the top of the car. With the exception of bruises, none of the passengers in this car were seriously injured.

Physicians and assistance was summoned from Kittanning, ten miles away, and two wrecking trains with another corps of physicians, was sent from this city.

The dead were taken to Kittanning, where they were prepared for burial, and the injured that needed hospital attention were also taken to Kittanning. A number of the injured were able to proceed to their destinations after having their injuries dressed at the scene of the wreck.

Telegraph lines were carried down by the cars falling against the telegraph poles and accurate news of the wreck was difficult to obtain until a late hour. Reports of large numbers of dead were spread broadcast, but as soon as communication was restored the railroad company issued an official list of dead and injured. All the victims were residents of western Pennsylvania.

Fire at Centre Hall.

On Saturday night when the citizens of our sister town were sleeping, the fire alarm sounded and in an instant the inhabitants were greatly excited. The fire was located in the barn of Harry Shirk near the P. R. R. station, and before the fire companies could do much the flames had gained great headway and the building was totally destroyed. The men worked earnestly and saved the other buildings that had already caught fire. Mr. Shirk's loss is heavy, as a valuable horse, a good cow and a dog were burned to death, besides his buggies, wagons and grain. Lately he has had his home and barn and other buildings painted and it was one of the prettiest places in Centre Hall. He had a small insurance, but not enough to cover the loss.

What Centre Hall needs is good fire protection, they should have a good engine and lots of hose. They have lots of good men and if they had something to work with they would save lots of property.

Dr. Pownell in Bellefonte.

Wednesday morning shortly after eight o'clock a special train arrived in Bellefonte over the Bald Eagle Valley and had on Dr. Pownell who gave the railroad employees of Bellefonte a lecture on the first aid to the injured. He explained how the injured should be attended in case of a wreck. His talk was interesting and instructive.

AN AGE LADY'S DEATH.

Mrs. Mary Hicklen Died at the Home of her son in this Place.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 Mrs. Mary Hicklen of Unionville, passed away at the home of her son, Cheney Hicklen on Logan St. Mrs. Hicklen has been visiting her son for the past six weeks, about a week ago she was stricken with a stroke of paralysis, gradually growing weaker until the end came. Her maiden name was Mary Reynolds and was the daughter of Israel and Sarah Reynolds and was born in Milesburg 74 years ago.

She was married to Enos T. Hicklen of Mt. Eagle who preceded her to the grave. She formerly resided at Mt. Eagle but of late has made her home with her sister at Unionville.

She is survived by two sons, William W., of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Cheney K. of Bellefonte.

She also leaves the following sisters: Mrs. Ann Gower, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Rebecca Lonschire, Mrs. Martha Harris, of National City, Cal. and Mrs. E. M. Lucas of Unionville.

The funeral services were held Saturday morning at 8:30 from the residence of her son. Rev. J. B. Stein officiated. Interment in the Dix Run cemetery.

State College Booming.

When we speak of the future of State College we do not mean The Pennsylvania State College, that high-class institution of learning, but the borough of State College, which naturally will owe all its future to the continued growth, progression, and high standing of the former. And that the people of Centre county, men who have money to invest and naturally desire to invest it in the safest and best paying way, are turning toward State College, is evidence of the fact that they have great hopes for its future.

This summer, in addition to the building being done by the College proper, there are from ten to a dozen dwelling houses being erected in the borough by private individuals. And they are not cheap houses, as practically all of the buildings are of brick and will cost anywhere from three to twelve thousand dollars. Probably the largest and most expensive house being erected is one by James Lytle, which will have twenty-two rooms and will cost close to twelve thousand dollars. J. C. Meyer, of this place, is erecting a house there that will cost in the neighborhood of seven thousand dollars while there are a number which will cost four and five thousand. This, in fact, is on a par if not in excess of values of real estate in Bellefonte, and it all shows unmistakably that the investors look for a continued growth at State College.

The Academy Preparing for a Prosperous Year.

The prospects are very good for a large attendance of boarding pupils this year at the Bellefonte Academy.

The main building and the Thomas House and the Beezer House will be occupied as dormitories. There will be a very strong corps of teachers, very likely Miss Hill who for some time has been studying at the Columbia University for a Master's degree in English will return this year, to her former position as head of the English department in the Academy.

This fact will surely please the patrons and students of this institution.

The Athletic talent among the new students will be very strong.

Some big foot ball men are coming and a star pitcher from New York City, who pitched the school of Commerce nine to victory in the Champion ship series this spring among the leading schools of New York City.

This pitcher had Voss who was the State College catcher this year as his own catcher a year ago.

Church Hunts Pastor.

The salary of $4500 a year has failed to tempt a minister to accept the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church in New Castle, Pa. which has been without a pastor for more than a year. During this time there has been a standing offer of $3500 a year for any one who would accept the place, but none accepted because of dissensions in the congregation, which, it is claimed, has made it impossible for the minister to remain.

The Rev. Waldo Cherry of Troy N. Y. was called and a salary of $5000 was offered to tempt him, but he has declined, and will remain in Troy at a smaller salary. A committee is scouring the country for a preacher who can fill the place.

OFFICER FLED FROM SLAYER

As a Result he was Degraded for Cowardice

WAS A DRAMATIC SCENE

In Trial Room of New York Police
Headquarters—First Time this has Happened in 30 Years,

HIS BADGE WAS TAKEN FROM HIM.

New York, July 31.—A remarkable scene, closely paralleling that memorable one in Paris when Captain Alfred Dreyfus was publicly degraded before the French army, was enacted in the trial room at police headquarters today. For the first time in more than thirty years a patrolman had been adjudged guilty of cowardice. He is Stephen S. Walsh, who according to the charge made against him, last week fled from an armed man who had shot and killed a woman. The keen interest with which the unusual case was followed rose to a point of dramatic intensity when Police Commissioner Bingham, who had presided personally at the trial, announced in a voice choked with emotion that the charge against the unfortunate man had been proven. Then the commissioner turned to Inspector Richard Walsh in whose district Stephen Walsh was a patrolman, but who is no relative of the demised man, and directed the inspector to strip Walsh of his shield and uniform buttons so that he might not even leave the trial room with the emblem of his former position as a policeman in good standing on his person.

The crowd looked on in wonder and excitement as the inspector advanced to perform his unpleasant task. The demised man stood still and offered no resistance as the shield was unpinning from his breast, but when the inspector started to detach the buttons of the uniform Stephen Walsh stepped back and appealed to his attorney against any further humiliation being put upon him in the presence of his former comrades. Commissioner Bingham, who was laboring under great excitement, then interposed and directed the inspector to conduct his former subordinate to the steps of the police building and eject him. Stephen Walsh offered no resistance and went with the inspector to the outer doorway where he was formally directed to leave the building. Throughout the unusual proceeding Stephen Walsh maintained his composure.

As he was being escorted from the room, Commissioner Bingham, with a wave of his hand indicated that he desired the other men in uniform to remain. "Come up close in front all you men in uniform," said the commissioner in a voice choked with emotion while his eyes brimmed with tears. "I have a word to say to you all but I can scarcely say it. My cheeks have burned with shame here even to think of a charge of cowardice being preferred against a man in this department. It has been our pride to say that whatever other faults there may have been there was no cowardice in this department. I gave the accused in this case every chance to defend himself but it has been clearly proven that he failed. This thing must never happen again while you and I are together. You must forget this, but you must remember the proud record of thirty years before when not one man in the many thousands failed to do his duty in the face of any danger."

Stephen Walsh was one of the two men against whom a charge of cowardice was made last week when Frank Warner was permitted to escape after killing Esther Norling in 42nd street. Before Warner was captured he shot and mortally wounded John C. Wilson, and terrorized hundreds of persons. Patrolman Roosa, the officer whose name was coupled with that of Walsh in the cowardice charge, was exonerated after a full hearing before the commissioner.

Acknowledging the Corn.

Positively I verily thought that I was encouraging a contest for the tallest garden or sweet corn in Centre County. I was too easily the winner and had no competitors.

When it was too late, I discovered that mine was the first prize champion corn field grown. Some of the seed had been sent to me. I have four other rotation patches at proper distances apart. The champion corn made such an astonishing growth now 9 ft., 10 inches that I encouraged competition and to any in doubt, I repeat the gospel challenge "Come and see." With no roasting ears from that corn, I save it all for seed for farmers use another year.

Yours Agriculturally,
July 31st 1907, R. CRITTENDEN.

A QUEER VISITOR.

A Strange Hobo Drops into Bellefonte for a Few Hours.

On Thursday evening Bellefonte had a unique visitor for a few hours in the person of a wanderluster who calls himself "A No 1." And that about all anybody else can call him, too, for he never gives any other name, and declines to tell what his real name is if he has one. A No 1 dropped in Thursday on his decennial visit. He is a professional genteel hobo, and makes it a point to visit each place that he likes once in ten years. On these occasions he leaves his mark cut on some building, water tank or other structure, with the date, and when he returns hunts up the same spot and puts down the later date.

The man is an artist, too, in more ways than one. To prove it while in Keichline's store Thursday night he took a big potato, and with his knife in a few minutes fashioned from it an Indian head much in the manner of a sculptors who work in butter or other soft substances. He gave the Indian head to conductor Joe Kelleher, who was with him at the time.

A No 1. was recently in Johnstown and to the Johnstown Tribune he gave the following account of his travels:

"A nice, clean-looking doggie gets more beefsteak and better treatment than a saggy, dirty cur."

"While I'm at it," he said, "I might as well write you a few lines on how it feels to steal a ride on a break beam under a train." And he dashed off the following:

"Say, it's great—but oh, my—the first time it's a tough proposition. You hold on, clinch your teeth, close your eyes, and try to forget that you are sitting on a break beam only about four inches above ground and that you have not one chance in a billion to get out alive, should anything happen to the train—a cow be run over and dragged along the track while the train moves ahead at a sixty-mile-an-hour gait, or a nice large rock picked up, perhaps, by a brake on the car ahead, hit you a crack so as to knock you off and under; or some fool fellow drop an empty bottle between the coach platform ahead of you and glass splinters with force enough to penetrate wood starts a-flying all over. But, see, there is a good side to this riding. If you best them, they can't beat you, as on a slow freight, no one can disturb you, at least not between stations. Then again, right after a rain or on a rock ballasted road, when no dust bothers you, the sensation is grand, as the jumping up and down of the breakbeam is just like riding a horse each joint means a jump—and the faster the train runs the more of them. Then again you can see the sparks fly as though out of a converter when the brakes are set tight by the engineer. On a sunny day it is a shady, cool place, on a rainy day a protection; on a dark night a sure winner to reach your destination. And as to accidents—well, life is a gamble, anyhow, and I rather would prefer being ground up going sixty miles an hour smelling smoke and dust, than have a dozen doctors tell me I will not live a year."

Asked if he didn't fear in the end he'd get ground up with his ride-stealing. A No. 1 said he shouldn't wonder that would be the case. But for one thing he didn't propose to linger in suffering if anything of the kind should occur, and he pulled out of one of his small pockets a wee vial containing a few grains of cyanide of potassium, a small crumb of which, placed on the tongue, will cause death in twenty seconds. "No roasting in wrecks or slow deaths for me," he said, "as long as this is within reach."

In spite of his fastidiousness A. No. 1 is a tramp in the true sense of the word. In 1881 wanderlust got the best of him and he left a comfortable home in Cambridge Springs, and started to roam. Since that time he has been in every civilized country of the world and has traveled a total of 441,880 miles, 92,000 miles of which was upon water. He speaks four languages and his ready wit and gift of gab have enabled him to travel all those thousands of miles practically free, as he has paid but $7.56 for transportation in all his travels. He carries a gold and silver medal, awarded him by the "Police Gazette" for making the quickest time from San Francisco to New York without paying car fare. A No. 1 made the trip in eleven days and six hours, riding the rod of fast trains most of the way.

This famous tramp has been in every city of any importance in the United States. He is honest and says he does not use tobacco or intoxicating drink. He carries life insurance policies, which he keeps paid up, and has arranged for the placing of a monument at his grave when his time comes. He has invested $575 in the tombstone, but the inscription will be plain "A No. 1."

A No. 1 when traveling wears over his street clothing a suit of over clothes, which preserve the texture of his other habiliments, and his first duty on alighting from a train is to wash and change underclothing, if such a change is deemed necessary. He does not mingle with other tramps, but none of them so hungry if he is appealed to. He carries toothbrush, clothesbrush, shoe blacking, and every thing necessary to keep him well groomed, and those who see him are more likely to think him a travelling salesman than a professional hobo.

A CARNIVAL OF CRIMES

Continues Unabated in New York City

A LITTLE GIRL VICTIM

One of the Most Atrocious Murders on Record—Worse than Work of the Berlin Fiend.

THE BODY SHOCKINGLY MUTILATED

New York, August 1.—"The graveyard" as the foreign populated neighborhood on First avenue, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets is known locally, gave up today a fresh crime, rivaling in atrocity the mysterious butcheries of last week. The latest discovered victim was an eight year old girl, and, like the two young women murdered, she had been shockingly mistreated before death and the body mutilated when life was extinct.

The three murders are strikingly similar. Last Thursday night, a woman was strangled in a Twenty-second street boarding house; the next morning, the body of a still unidentified woman, who had been choked to death, was found in an area-way in East 90th street. Katie Pritschler, daughter of a restaurant waiter, disappeared a week ago and was killed that night. A ribbon placed about the throat and drawn so tightly that it cut the flesh showed how she died. Her body was found today.

If the brutality of the murders can be qualified, that of the Pritschler girl ranks first. She was assaulted, murdered and then her lifeless form was horribly mutilated.

"The graveyard" takes its name from the proximity of the old Thirteenth street cemetery, and the locality has been the scene of several revolting murders. The majority of the residents are foreigners.

Carl Pritschler, the father of Katie, is a hardworking, respectable citizen. He has several other children all younger than Katie. The girl left home at 349 East Thirteenth street last Thursday night to play in the street. When she failed to return, the father notified the police and a general alarm was sent out. The body was today discovered within a block of her home and scarcely a hundred yards from the location of a placard placed by the father calling attention to the fact that his child was lost. How the body could have remained undiscovered for a week is not explained.

The girl's body was stumbled upon by a woman, who visited the basement of the house, at 203 First avenue. It lay upon a berry cart, with seemingly no effort at concealment.

"You can say for me," Coroner Harburger declared, "that the crimes in Berlin of which the newspapers have told have not been one thousandth part as bad as the murder of this little girl."

The coroner would not permit the body to be photographed.

When news of the finding of the little one's body spread through the neighborhood excitement rose to such a pitch that the removal of the body and the arrest of Ripollano almost caused a riot. Many thousands of persons were in the streets when the wagon from the morgue arrived. At sight of the covered body the crowd vented its grief and rage in a babel of tongues. The police were obliged to use force to clear the streets.

John Kusmich, the Russian watchman under arrest as a suspicious person and who is said to have been seen in the company of the girl whose body was found in the area-way was today remanded without bail until Saturday. No clue to the murder in 22nd street was secured to-day.

Later it was decided to hold Bonfanti for examination tomorrow. Dora Messner, who is said to have been seen in the company of the cobbler, was arraigned as a witness. She was arraigned in the night court and held for the coroner.

Celebrates Seventy-Eighth Birthday.

On Wednesday of last week the children and grand-children of George S. Gray gathered at his comfortable home near Stormstown and helped him celebrate the seventy-eighth anniversary of his birth. His brother, Mr. Samuel Gray with his wife, of Martinsburg, with a number of friends and neighbors were also present and the day was passed most pleasantly by all. Mr. Gray was the recipient of many useful presents.

Thinks Teddy is Trying Out Green
Timber But None Will Suit.

"An' these ar-re th' candydates we've got to beat with our own impeeryal leader, whether 'ts William Jennings Bryan or someman who tha'l be nameless or will be afther he runs. That is they think they're candydates, but it looks to me as though Teddy was tryin' in a bunch iv green motermen to see whether they cud run th' car th' way he wants it to run. He skipped Fair banks who niver drove annything before but a mule team. He cudden't stand f'r Foraker because he on'y wanted to stop to l't passengers on at th' alleys. He thrived Root but Root hauled up at every crossing. An' now he's thryin' out Taft. Look at thim comin' up th' street. Taft knows th' brakes well but he ain't very familiar with th' power. 'Go ahead,' says Roosevelt. 'Don't stop here. Pass that there banker by. He's on'y wan fare. There's a crowd iv people at th' next corner. Stop f'r thim an' give thim time to get aboard. Now start th' car with a jump so they'll know something is goin' on. Go fast by Wall Street an' ring th' gong, but stopp and let thim get aboard whin they're out iv breath. Gowan now. Who's that ol' lady standin' in th' mid iv th' street wavin, an umbrella? Oh, be hivens, 'tis th' Constitution. Give her a good bump. No, she got out iv th' way. Ye'd have nailed her if hadn't twisted th' brake. What ailed ye? Well niver mind; we may yet her comin' back.' An' so it goes an' I can't tell, an' Teddy can't tell yet whether Taft will make a good motorman or not. Sometimes it looks as if they didn't have the same idee. In his heart Taft still sticks to th' old fashioned Yale theory that a throlley car is propelled by a brake, while Teddy's idee iv a brake is that th' best thing about it is th' handle that ye can remove to subjugate richons pass yers."

"An' there ye ar-re. A fine lot iv men fr anny republican to choose fr'm an' an' akeely fine list f'r him to reject fr'm. He can take his pick an' be sure that he can make no mistake. f'r no matter who th' candydiate iv th' republican party that you an' I, Hinnessy, will be bound to throw bricks at next year, his right name will be Teddy Roosevelt."

WHO IS A DEMOCRAT?

"An' who ar-re we goin' to nomy-nate? says ye. Have th', dimmocracy no candydate? I will tell ye a secret. Wan iv th' most prominent dimmocrats in South Chicago was in here to-day, an' he tells me that it's all framed up to place our prond standard waster more into th' hands iv that man who has borne it in th' past unsuccessfully but gloriously—"

Mr. Hinnessy—"Horray!"

Mr. Dooley—"A man that ivry dimmocrat is so proud to follow in defeat as in victory—"

Mr. Hinnessy—"Ye bet ye!"

Mr. Dooley—"That grand, bold, fightin', true-blue, uncompromisin' dimmocratic statesman Alton B—, hol' on, Hinnessy. Don't be mad. 'Twas on'y a joke. I know who ye were hellorin' f'r an' I guess I can fix it f'r him a'right."

"Do ye think a candydiate ought to lay quiet or keep in th' public eye?" ask Mr. Hinnessy when he had cooled down.

"I don't know," said Mr. Dooley. "I'll on'y say this, if I wanted to be prsident at I wd th'ry not to be a cinder in th' public eye."

Water Being Tested.

Attaches of the engineering division of the State Health Department are about completing an investigation into the drinking water furnished to the traveling public at the railway stations in Pennsylvania. Samples of water have been taken from the coolers at practically every station, and tests are now being made of them.

The engineering division, of which F. Herbert Snow is chief, is also being asked freely about tests of water supplies for the use of small communities, one of the recent requests having been made by the borough of Camp Hill for a state test of the purity of its supply. This town and others just over the Susquehanna from Harrisburg have been looking into the water supplies to them for some time.

In a number of instances the department has declined to issue permits to several towns in the Allegheny Valley until sewage disposal works are erected. The establishment of plants is being insisted upon all over the state in the interest of the public health.

Want Good Road.

There is some agitation in Bellefonte over a state road eastward from at place towards Hecla Park and application is to be made to the state department shortly to have the work done. With the state road completed to Mill Hall and one to Hecla Park from Bellefonte the two roads eventually be connected and make an excellent speedway.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 27 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

One of Them.

A foreign tourist who had received permission to visit one of our large asylums for the insane was surprised at the neatness, quietude and good order that prevailed within the institution. He asked if it was always like that, and the polite attendant who was showing him through the buildings said it was.

"We have what we call our violent wards, of course, but I presume you would not care to see these."

"I think not."

"It is just as well, perhaps. They are rather noisy, although, of course, we exercise the same care in providing for the welfare of the inmates that you see in this part of the institution. We also have a section where we keep the incurables."

"These inmates, then, are considered curable?"

"Their cases are at least hopeful."

"I am greatly interested," said the visitor, "but I will not take up any more of your time. You have other duties to attend to, have you not?"

"Yes, sir. This is merely one of my recreations. In one of the rooms in the main building I am engaged during most of the time in pursuing what may be called my life work."

"Your life work? May I ask what that is?"

"Haven't you heard?" said the attendant, in a tone of astonishment. "I am compiling an index to Webster's dictionary."—Youth's Companion.

For Shakespeare's Sake.

There is something remarkably attractive for an actress in the rolling cadences of the Bard of Avon, and I do not wonder that so many players dream of playing his work. I think it was in Los Angeles some years ago that a young actor who was then becoming popular decided that the time was ripe for him to do Hamlet. What his mental process was in arriving at this decision I have of course no means of knowing, but an apocryphal anecdote was told of him the morning after his first appearance as the melancholy Dane. It seems a friend approached him and said:

"How do you feel this morning?"

"I have failed to get my whole meaning into the character. I shall never play Hamlet again," was the reply.

"Oh, but you must play the part once again," remonstrated the friend.

"And why?" asked the young actor despondently.

"Shakespeare turned over in his coffin last night. You will have to do it once again, for you can't leave the poor chap in that position," said the friend.

CAN'T ELOPE TO YORK STATE.

To Get Married After January Next
Without Securing a License.

Bellefonte couples wishing to elope and be joined in the bonds of holy wedlock in New York State, in order to be romantic, must now comply with the new law and get a regular lovers license in the same manner as here in the Keystone State.

Governor Hughes, of New York, has signed the Cobb marriage license bill. It is anticipated that the bill will seriously effect the rushing business several of our ministers have counted on several years, in joining Pennsylvania couples, who came across the line to avoid a law in their own state, somewhat similar to the Cobb bill.

The Cobb measure will take effect January 1, next. It introduces in York State a system of marriage licenses to be issued by town and city clerks in the place in which the bride lives and makes it the duty of officials performing ceremonies to make return of these licenses to the town or city clerk on or before the 10th day of the month succeeding the marriage. Violation of the provision is made a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of from $20 to $50 for each offense.

Corning has been a mecca for love-sick Pennsylvania couples who rushed there and had the knot tied save the Journal of that place, and it has been the scene for many a romance, some of which have ended happily, but not a few have resulted in hasty and ill-timed marriages. Binghamton has also been a favorite place for young Pennsylvania couples and it was charged in the papers of that city that several ministers paid hackmen at so much per couple brought to them. It has been said that a local minister formally gave hackmen a fee for each couple brought to him. Elmira, Olean and Buffalo have also been the mecca for many Bellefonte love-sick couples, some of whom being married in haste are repenting at leisure.

The Cobb bill in its original form specified that a couple could not be married until five days after securing the marriage license. That clause, however, has been stricken out. It is a question, therefore, whether the law will have the effect desired, as now a couple can be married immediately upon securing a license.

Blanchard's Fares.

By LILLIAN WHITMARK.

Copyrighted, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.

"What's up?" Blanchard smiled down at Kitty's tear filled eyes.

"The boat," she sobbed. "It left me."

"Most discourteous boat," said Blanchard severely. "How did it happen?"

"I was late," she explained. "They had just thrown the ropes off, and the horrid captain would not tie them up again, and there's all the girls, and I can't go."

"That's the Sunday school excursion, isn't it?" he asked.

Kitty nodded her head. "They're going to Beaver Island, and I've got a brand new dress, and Ted had the lunch box, and the house is all shut up because everybody is on the boat, and I've got to sit on the steps until they come home, and—"

"Stop," implored Blanchard laughingly. "Three more 'ands' and you will have totaled the world's unhappiness. Not for millions would I have you sit on the front stoop all this pleasant day bereft of your family friends. This is a serious matter, Kitty. I think that we shall have to go after that boat and make the captain apologize. Now, you wait here a little while and see what happens."

He perched the child on a dry goods box on the dock and went off toward the street. Kitty looked out over the lake at the departing steamboat, but her tears had dried. There was something so comforting about Guy Blanchard. He was so big and strong and so kind to little folks. He would do something; he said he would.

Presently she heard a soft coughing sound, and then came Blanchard's voice in cheery half. She slipped from her perch and peered over the edge of the dock.

There, just below her, was Blanchard standing in front of a gayly striped awning that all but concealed the gunwales of a saucy little power launch.

"Jump, kiddies," he called cheerily. "Don't be afraid. I'll catch you. This boat for Beaver Island and the Sunday school picnic; fare one kiss; all aboard!"

"I'M GOING TO HAVE A PICNIC ALL BY MYSELF."

Kitty summoned her courage and made a leap, landing in the strong arms and finding herself transferred to a wicker armchair softly cushioned and delightfully shaded by the awning. On a locker stood a box of candy invitingly open, and Guy was smiling at her from a funny little pen up front.

"Now we're off," he announced briskly. "Shall we catch up with the steamer or beat them to the landing?"

"You can't get there first in this little thing," she said, with a sigh. "Can you, Guy?"

"Sure," he declared confidently. "We'll be fishing from the dock when they come up." He pushed some funny levers and things, and the coughing began again, to rapidly change to a sharp staccato bark. The high powered motor ran so smoothly and they slipped through the water so easily that Kitty did not realize how fast they were going until she turned to look back at the dock and found that it was rapidly dwindling.

"We're going awful fast," she called.

"That's what we want," he answered over his shoulder. "We shall catch the Republic in no time at all."

"I wish Mabel was here," she said regretfully. Guy's lips set in a straight line. His heart echoed the wish even while he knew that, had Mabel been left behind, too, he could not have come to the rescue. It was only a lovers' quarrel, but for two weeks it had made him miserable to think of it. He was too proud to beg when he was in the right, and he could not tell from her laughing face that she was as miserable as he.

"Don't you wish Mabel was here?" demanded Kitty, receiving no reply to her first remark.

"Sure," he answered, "but she's on the Republic. What's the use of wishing for what you cannot have?"

The child lost the meaning of the wistful tones. "You haven't been around lately," she commented. "I don't like it when you don't come. Why don't you?"

Blanchard smiled grimly. How was this child to understand?

"I have not had the time," he said evasively. "I've an idea," he went on to change the topic. "Suppose you hide when we go past the steamer. Then when they get there and find you waiting for them you can tell them that you flew like Peter Pan."

Kitty clapped her hands at the conceit. "That'll be fine," she declared. "How can we do it?"

"Unfasten the awnings on that side and let them drop," he explained. "It will be impossible to see you if you sit right in the middle."

Kitty flew to carry out instructions, and she was just in time, for the launch had gained rapidly on the steamer, and presently they were slipping past the slow moving excursion boat. It was still an hour's ride to the island, and the Republic would take an hour and a half. Kitty was so full of her new idea that she forgot the earlier conversation, and Blanchard gave a sigh of relief when at last she was safely landed without having pursued her investigation further. He was backing away from the dock when she called to him. He ran alongside again.

"You forgot your fare," she reminded as her little arms went about his neck and the full red lips were laid against his own.

"I am afraid that I am a poor captain to forget to collect my fares," he laughed. "Take care of yourself, kiddies, and don't fall off the dock. It will be half an hour before the boat gets here."

"Why don't you stay?" she demanded. "Mabel will give you some of our lunch."

"I have some here," he laughed as he indicated a locker. "I'm going to have a picnic all by myself."

He was clear of the dock now, and the launch gained speed. At the south end of the island was a little cove where he could go ashore and have lunch. It was a short task to broil the ham over the coals and heat the coffee. Then he filled his pipe and lay back to enjoy a smoke before starting back to town.

The cove was difficult of access from the picnic grounds, and not even an echo of the merry-makers reached him. He drowsed off and finally fell asleep to dream of Mabel.

He roused to find her sitting on the sand beside him.

"You are not very courteous to your guests," she scolded in mock anger. "Here I've walked all the way from the picnic grounds to visit you and find you asleep."

"I wasn't expecting company," he said. "How did you know I was here?"

"Kitty said you had gone off to have a picnic by yourself, and I guessed where you had come. You brought me here twice last year. It was awfully good of you, Guy, to bring the poor child."

"She seemed so broken up," he explained awkwardly. Manlike, he hated to be thanked.

"And I want to tell you," she went on bravely, "that I am sorry that I was so horrid the other day."

"We were both to blame," he conceded, "but it's all right now, dear."

"And, please, will you come around to the picnic grounds?" she asked.

"For the same fare that Kitty paid," he offered as he took her in his arms. "But I took Kitty for half fare," he added, and their lips met again.

Pardonable Offenses.

After a careful canvass these have been found to be pardonable sins:

Lying about fish. One can hardly be expected in explaining the length of his fish to use a microscope.

Saying you're not at home. This is the pardonable sin of social circles usually, and of men who have calls from collectors frequently.

Lying about your remarkable children. Of course a fellow doesn't really lie, but when he thinks of something bright his four-year-old might have said he hesitates through modesty to admit authorship, and so it is properly attributed to the four-year-old.

Suppressing, altering or otherwise disguising the facts of your age, false hair and wrinkles.

Beating the other fellow's story. Example: Jones has just finished a story; Smith waits impatiently to the end and then begins: "That's nothing. Why, when I was touring the west with Custer," etc.—Baltimore News.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood. If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is overworking in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle by mail. Home of Swamp-Root, free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and the address, Binghamton, N. Y. on every bottle.

Study of Man.

The only school for the study of human nature is the world. The only text books are the works of men like Shakespeare, Hugo, Cervantes, Sterne and other students who learned in that school. But the effectual study of human nature demands from the student a vast fund of love and sympathy. You will never get admitted into the heart of a fellow creature unless you go as a friend.—Robert Blairford in Clarion.

Finance.

The agreeable visitor, says Judge, smiled upon the son of the house and said:

"Willie, if you recite that poem your mother taught you I'll give you a penny."

"Not likely! I can get a nickel anywhere for not reciting it," Willie replied.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

By local applications, as they "cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Business Men's Picnic.

The next great attraction will be the Great and Only Business Men's Picnic on Tuesday August the 20th.

From all indications this is going to be the most glorious picnic ever held by the combining counties—Clinton and Centre. The day will be a dandy as all the weather prophets say no rain will fall that week, so you can build on going in your best bib and tucker. The entire day will be taken up with all kinds of amusements. Perhaps one of the greatest features of the occasion will be the professional base ball game between the Auto team of Lock Haven and the strong Philadelphia, since that has not known defeat this season. If you don't like the base ball game, you can dance until you are satisfied. Many will doubtless enjoy that part of the programme. Then, one of the finest bands in the state will give a continuous concert all day long. Many people you know would rather hear good music than eat a hearty meal. But give us the meal, the music would be nice for a desert.

The committees are working earnestly to have this the best Business Men's Picnic ever held. Every business house in Bellefonte and Lock Haven will be closed so tight that you would think it was Sunday.

The Railroad Company will be able to accommodate the large crowds as they are making great preparations for this glorious occasion. Let everybody talk about it, ask your neighbors what they are going to take along to eat, and if you think they are going to have something better than you, why just tell them "We'll eat together."

We have written to "Old Farmer Jones" and his good wife "Sarah" to be sure and go and take enough along for their friends. He answered our letter and this is what he said.

"Dear Editor—Your invitation to be present at the big picnic at Heckley on the 20th has been accepted by me and Sarah.

Yours fraternally,
JONES.

—Don't forget the ball game Friday afternoon between the Professional and Business Men of the town.

Bad Breath.

A well-known physician, who undoubtedly knows, declares that bad breath has broken off more matches than bad temper.

There are ardent lovers who must sometimes wish their sweethearts presented sweeter mouths to be kissed.

Good teeth cannot prevent bad breath when the stomach is disordered.

The best cure for bad breath is a cleansing out of the body by use of the tonic laxative. This is a herb medicine, sold in 25c. and 50c. packages by druggists and it is saving more doctor's bills than any other medicine has ever saved.

Lane's Family Medicine

It cures headache, backache, indigestion, constipation and skin diseases.

Date Reunion.

The reunion of the Dale family at Oak Hall on Saturday, August 3rd was a grand success. Promptly at 10 o'clock, Geo. Dale president of the association, called the meeting to order. Rev. W. H. Dale, of Cleveland, Ohio, chaplain of the association, invoked the divine blessing. The secretary Dr. J. Y. Dale read the minutes of the two previous meetings, first of the preliminary meeting held Dec. 27 1905 for the purpose of effecting an organization and second the minutes of the first annual reunion held August 4, 1906. It was a source of gratification to ascertain that no member of the Dale family living in the east or west had died during the year, although the connection is quite large. After the preliminaries had been finished, the regular programme was taken up. The principal feature of the forenoon was an excellent paper prepared by Dr. J. Y. Dale. The Dr. had made special preparations and great research in order to give a complete history of the Dale family from the time Christian Dale the first, left Germany in 1799 to make his home in America. The paper dealt largely in local history which was most interesting, not only to the members of the Dale family but also to friends and neighbors who had come to listen to the proceedings.

The meeting was adjourned at 12 o'clock for dinner, which was a very important feature of the day. A table loaded with the very best that could be prepared was out in the orchard near by and beneath the shade of the overhanging boughs, all present enjoyed themselves in partaking of one of the finest dinners that could be prepared.

After the dinner was finished the meeting was again called to order in the hall of Victor Grange where all the meetings have been held. Dr. Dale finished his paper which had not been completed before the noon hour. Dr. A. H. Tuttle of the University of Virginia and Prof. W. A. Buckout of the State College, who had been interesting listeners to the entire programme were called upon for short addresses. These gentlemen in a neat, happy manner, expressed their gratification in being able to be present and the interest they felt in all that they have heard during the day.

One of the interesting features of the afternoon exercises was a number of recitations by members who belong to the fifth and sixth generations of the Dale family. Among those who added interest in this respect were Mrs. Sarah Dale, Mrs. Carrie Dale and Misses Catharine Dale, Annie Dale, Lucella Dale, Mamie Dale and Master Edwin Dale. Clement Dale, the historian of the association, read the paper which dealt largely in the history of the first, second and third generation of the Dale family since they came to this country. The first three generations of this family have all passed away. The history presented by Mr. Dale was gathered from numerous records and papers in his possession and from tradition handed down from one generation to another. The paper was listened to with marked attention throughout.

Brief addresses were made by Rev. J. F. Stonecypher, Rev. W. H. Dale, John S. Dale, Willard Dale, A. A. Dale, W. J. Dale and Henry Hoy.

The entire exercises were interspersed with most excellent music furnished by a choir composed of members of the Dale family. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

Geo. Dale—President.
David E. Dale—Vice-president.
Dr. J. Y. Dale—Secretary.
John S. Dale—Assistant secretary.
W. J. Dale—Treasurer.
W. H. Dale—Chaplain.
Clement Dale—Historian.
Executive Committee—A. A. Dale, A. W. Dale, Philip S. Dale, Dr. James S. Dale, Edmund Dale.

This closed the second annual reunion of the Dale family which was voted by all present to be a complete success.

The Post Card King.

Mr. Geo. T. Bush the post card man, has just received from Germany another fine lot of new Bellefonte and Centre County views this time mostly in colors and they certainly are works of art.

The following is a list of them in the colors. The Fair Ground with the mountain background is a beauty. The view of North Alleghany St. as well as the "Entrance to Penna's Cave are fine". He has also the South East Corner of the Diamond showing from Garman's Opera House clear down to the Braut House and a view of High St. looking from the Penna. R. R. crossing.

There are three new Black and white views all being very fine pictures they are. "The Speckled Beauties" Paradise, being a beautiful view of the Hecla Stream. "The State Fish Hatchery" a good view of the Hatchery at the Gap and a fine view of John Uzzle's Deer Park at Snow Shoe with the deer showing well. These cards will prove to be popular and be great advertisers for Bellefonte which they are the best kind and Mr. Bush deserves considerable credit for the great distribution he has accomplished of this Bellefonte advertising matter. The combination he is now offering of a "Souvenir letter" The Souvenir Stamp Book and the Heart of Bellefonte fifty six pictures in all for a quarter.

Behind the Choir Curtain

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.

Copyrighted, 1907, by P. C. Eastment.

There had been an immense amount of irreverence in the choir before the new soprano came. The tenor and the contralto and the bass and the old soprano had flirted from the opening anthem to the benediction, and as they were hidden from the congregation by a green balise curtain there had been no scandal, although certain members of the session had complained of weird sounds that had seemed to echo from the organ loft and die in the steeple.

With the advent of the new soprano, however, came a different state of affairs. Both the tenor and the bass fell in love with her at sight, and the contralto, being forty and fat and fair, submitted comfortably to the new singer's conquest and smiled on her in a way unprecedented in choir history, where the green eyed monster is supposed to rage rampant.

The new soprano was not irreverent, and hence it came about that romance was succeeded by religion, and the tenor and the bass paid strict attention to the responses and to the sermon and bent their heads during prayers, although so earnest were the soprano's meditations that the bass was constrained now and then to glance at her and after intercepting the tenor's ardent observation would again seem wrapped in his devotions.

At the time of the opening prayer the sun came through the rose window. A white dove spread his wings against the stained glass background, and as the soprano stood up for her solo he seemed to hover over her head, and her shining hair made a golden halo.

"Oh, she's too good to be true," the bass told the tenor as they went home together one Sunday in May.

"She is perfect," the tenor declared fervently. "We are a lot of sinners, and she has come among us like a little saint to make us ashamed of ourselves."

It was discovered after three weeks that the bass had given up smoking.

THEY HAD TEA AND MUFFINS.

In five weeks the tenor signed the pledge, and in six the contralto stopped bleaching her hair and came to choir practice with her head tied up in a veil to hide the inevitable discrepancies as to color.

"She's a dear little thing," she confided to the bass. "She's poor and takes care of her mother."

"I'll take care of them both," the bass declared ardently, "if she will let me."

The tenor having made the same statement, the contralto carried the news to the soprano.

"They are both in love with you, my dear," she whispered one Sunday morning when the green curtain had been drawn and the congregation had settled down comfortably to hear the sermon.

"I'd rather not talk about such things in church if you don't mind," the soprano said gently, and the contralto agreed hastily and gave her earnest attention to the preacher.

"But tell me one thing," the tenor said to the contralto confidentially at choir practice, "how are we going to ask her? Her mother walks home with her after all the services, and she hasn't asked us to call, and she won't talk about secular things in church, and there you are!"

"Is love a secular thing?" the contralto questioned sentimentally. "She says it is," the tenor stated, "but I think it is divine."

Things came to something of a climax when the soprano's mother was taken sick.

"Now is your chance," said the contralto, all in a flutter, as she leaned toward the tenor.

But the bass was already begging the privilege.

"I had hoped you might let me," the tenor said as he stumbled over two chairs to get to her.

"Why not both of you?" said the soprano. "It's on your way home, and you will be company for each other the rest of the way."

"Oh, the aggravation of her!"

groaned the tenor as he went to get his hat, and the bass said things to himself in a dark corner.

The soprano invited them in, and they found her mother sitting up in a big chair, and they had tea and muffins served by the angelic hands of the soprano, who seemed more desirable than ever in this setting of domesticity.

"We might as well meet it like men," the bass told the tenor as they went home afterward. "We both love her, and if we are ever going to get a chance to ask her one of us will have to stay away next Sunday night, and the other one can take her home."

"Well," the tenor agreed, "but how shall we decide who will take her?"

"I'll toss a nickel," said the bass. "Heads I win." And he forthwith flipped one, and it turned up tails.

"Just my luck," said the bass gloomily, "but if you have the good looks I have the brains, and I shall know how to plead my case when the time comes."

The tenor was jubilant.

"I shall have first chance," he said.

When he talked to the contralto on Sunday morning the bass was not sanguine. "The tenor is young and handsome, and I won't be it."

The contralto comforted him.

"If I had the choosing I should pick you out," she said, and something in her voice made the bass turn and look at her. She had on her new summer hat, and her hair was prettily brown where it had grown out, and there was about her an effect of youth and jauntness that belied her forty years, and that made the bass, with his weight of forty-five, feel old.

"You are always my good friend," he said and squeezed her hand ever so slightly as he rose to sing a duet with the tenor.

In the solo part the tenor's voice rang out with such a note of triumph that the soprano caught her breath as she heard it. It was as if he sang, "I love, love, love," and yet the words were sacred. Within the breast of the little soprano something new stirred, something that was touched with the breath of divinity, so that it seemed no sacrifice for her to think of it in church.

"How beautifully he sings!" she said to the contralto, and the contralto agreed, "Yes, dear," but her eyes were on the bass, who now took up the strain.

When the tenor sat down, the soprano whispered in the shelter of the curtain, "How beautifully you sang!"

And the tenor said, "I sang to you," and between them flashed a glance that made the bass groan, and he murmured to the contralto: "The game is up. I have lost. They are talking love in church."

"It's as good a place as any," said the contralto. "There's nothing half so sweet in life as love's young dream."

She wiped her eyes as she said it, and the bass found himself asking,

"Do you really think that young love is as steadfast as the love of old friends?"

"Have you just found that out, Billy?" the contralto questioned.

"You have helped me to find it out," said the bass and squeezed her hand under the hymn book.

And under the hymn book of the soprano the hands of the two young lovers met.

"The beautiful part is that you told me in church," said the soprano, with her blue eyes lighted with divine fire.

"Yes, that is the beautiful part," said the tenor as, regardless of the contralto and the bass, he kissed her beneath the green balise curtain.

A Pica For Enlisting.

No man who will look carefully into the work of the army or of the navy can fail to realize that a career in either branch of our military service is one to which any man may give himself with the fullest devotion and with the highest ideals. Americans, as a rule, know little about the actual work of either of these services, and few realize that when a man enters the service of the army or of the navy, whether as officer or enlisted man, he enters a great school, a school in which is taught not only the discipline of self restraint, of cleanliness, of devotion to duty, but in which are taught also the elements of an education. An enlisted man who enters a regiment of the army, barely able to read and write, comes out, if he be a man of ambition and industry, at the end of three years in possession of the fundamentals of an English education. His officer stands to him not only in the relation of military director, but in the relation also of a teacher and a friend. There is no career open to an American boy, unless it be that of a teacher, which offers a larger opportunity than that of the army or navy officer to minister to the service of men.—President H. S. Pritchett in Atlantic.

WORKINGMEN EVERYWHERE USE PE-RU-NA.

Mr. Victor Patneade, 323 Madison street, Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and I never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work."

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again."

The Average Household Finds Pe-ru-na Not Only a Friend in Time of Need, But a Saving of Doctor Bills.

Pe-ru-na is to Be Found in Thousands of Homes of the Working Men.

A workingman's home is usually one with a large family. Children of all ages and both sexes are being reared. They are subject to slight ailments, winter and summer. A doctor is sent for every time a petty sickness occurs. The expense will keep the family poor.

In such a household Peruna becomes a real blessing. It promptly meets the most common ailments due to the cold of winter or the heat of summer. A stitch in time saves nine. A dose or two of Peruna prevents serious and extended illness many a time.

The workingmen everywhere have come to realize that Peruna is the workingman's friend and saves him not only sickness, but a great many dollars every year.

Rev. J. G. Dukes, Pastor of the Unitarian Church of Pinetown, N. C., writes:

"My wife has been in a very bad state of health for several years, and nothing seemed to do her any good until she began to use Peruna. Since then the color has returned to her face, and she is gaining in flesh every day, and I believe she is a well woman to-day. We always keep a bottle in the house, and Mrs. Dukes thinks it has done her more good than anything she has ever taken."

"My little boy ten years old, was pale and had but little life. He began to use Peruna the day his mother began. To-day his face is rosy, and he is out in the yard running and jumping with the rest of the children."

A Piece of (Not Very) Ancient History.

In last week's "Gazette" I noticed that the ladies were considering a project to advocate an improvement in the vicinity of the big Spring and securing enough ground around it to lay out a City Park.

It may be a matter of news to many of the present generation to know that such an attempt was at one time made, the ground secured and the project fairly started, but that it failed for the want of enough public spirited citizens in Bellefonte to carry it through.

The ground around "the Spring" was formerly the property of Wm. F. Reynolds and was purchased from him by D. G. Bush for the sum of $4200. In 1872 a proposition was made to him to sell the property to a stock company for the purpose of making it into a public Park. Being a public spirited citizen interested in the growth and prosperity of the town he readily entered into the proposition and accordingly upon the 13th day of April 1872 a paper was drawn up for the purpose of organizing a "Park Association."

The corporation was to consist of fifty shares of a par value of $200 each for the purpose of fitting, fencing and maintaining the meadow around the spring as a Park. Mr. Bush agreed to take fourteen of the fifty shares. Of the 36 remaining shares 17 were subscribed for at once and believing there would be no difficulty in securing the remaining 19 shares, the association was organized, a payment made to Mr. Reynolds, the ground was fenced in and seats placed under the trees upon the mound that stood within the grounds. But the subscribers to the stock over estimated the public spirit of the citizens. Many who were enthusiastic when the project was first proposed, who talked glibly about the "Summer house upon the Island," for the band and "rustic bridge" that was to be built across the water to it; when presented with the paper for their subscription for a share of stock, suddenly became mute and declined to sign. The sixteen stockholders who had taken 31 shares of the stock not feeling able of themselves to present a ten thousand dollar Park to the citizens of Bellefonte, concluded to loose the money they had paid and give up the project. Of the sixteen subscribers to the stock in 1872 only seven are now living and only five of them remain in Bellefonte. Since that time the railroad has passed through that three acre meadow, the mound has been disfigured and the place of beauty that "might have been" has been turned into a lumber yard. "Requiescat in pace."

Getting Ready for The Great Grangers.

The farmers all over Centre County have had a most prosperous season, the wheat, hay, barley and oats are great. The corn is a little late but in most places over the county it will be good, so our agricultural friends have good reasons to be thankful, so after they have gathered in all three large crops they intend to spend the entire week from Sept. 14 to 20, at the Grange Park. Here they can tell one another what they have been doing the past year what glorious crops they have stored away in their large barns. It is certainly a grand pleasure for these good tillers of the soil to gather at these camping grounds every year, their old friends and no doubt learn a great deal they never knew before as prominent farmers who have made a success of this profession gather there and deliver magnificent lectures on this work.

A great many changes have been made over the grounds. Among the improvements will be an exhibition building 84 by 96 feet. A great many more new tents have been bought so that fully 100 more tents can be accommodated this year.

A cash premium will be paid for every meritorious Agricultural production placed on exhibition on the day the article is entered.

The "old relic" museum will be better than last year, already farmers from down through the lower end of the valley are sending word to headquarters that they have heir looms two hundred years old and will place them on exhibition in the museum. These alone will be a great sight. So we say the Grangers for us in September. And hope to meet you there also.

The Hughes Family Doubly Afflicted.

The Hughes family are just undergoing a series of sad afflictions. Last week the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hughes died quite suddenly and hardly had the news of that sorrowful fact been received until word came from Milwaukee, Wis., that Donald the seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hughes, had been stricken with paralysis and was in a critical condition. The case is a most remarkable one, as it is an extremely rare occurrence for a child to become paralyzed and the attending physicians assign but two causes for it. That the stroke was caused either by a hemorrhage of the brain or a tumor. If the former there is a chance of not only saving the boy's life but effecting a permanent cure. If the latter, there is practically no hope of a permanent cure and very little of saving his life. It is a strange affliction and the parents are to be deeply sympathized with.

Don't Marry for Love Alone.

The only love that really stands the test of time, the only love that can be permanent, is the affection that has absolute respect for its basis.

A marriage based solely on sentiment or on romance, as you term it, is rarely happy. The trouble is so many women are affected in their judgment and in their attractions by purely external things—clothes, position, personal appearance—those are not the essentials. The questions every woman should ask concerning the man she would marry are these:

Is he earnest? Does he aim to do something large and worth while—something that will add to the education, the progress, the power of the world? Unless a man has his aim he is not a man in any large or enduring sense.

Not only should a suitor have a large purpose himself, but he should hold the proper view of the woman, should think of her as a helpmate, should be willing and glad to recognize her ability to aid him in his life work. Woman is a mighty factor in the progress of the world, and a true man will realize this and will encourage her to help him.

The happiest marriage results when both husband and wife have this large aim and when both work together for its realization.

Don't marry merely because you "Fall in Love." Ask yourself frankly if you are in love with the man himself or with unimportant details of dress or looks or manner that have caught your fancy.

Last Saturday night the citizens of this place were aroused by the cry of fire, when it was found that the stable of Mr. Harry Shirk was on fire.

The fire companies quickly responded and soon had the fire under control, but the stable was an entire loss.

The New Bickford Fire Brick Company.

Several weeks ago the Daily News published an item stating that the new Bickford Fire Brick Company had purchased the plant of the defunct Curwensville Fire Brick Company, at Curwensville, and would make that the base of their operations instead of building a new plant at DuBois as was originally intended. The Bickford people are now at work remodeling the Curwensville plant so that they will increase the output of some about twenty thousand brick a day and will be able to do this with less labor and less expense than was connected with the original operation of the plant.

They were very fortunate in their purchase of the Curwensville works. The plant is practically new and in excellent condition, and is about four miles nearer their clay lands than a plant at DuBois would have been. In addition to this fact they secured with their purchase extensive clay mines already opened up, coal mines already developed and within easy access and twenty thousand fire brick ready for the market; with cars and a full equipment of machinery necessary for operating the works.

The remodeling of the plant is being pushed as fast as possible and it is expected that everything will be in shape to put it in operation some time toward the last of this month. The Bickford company is the one organized through the instrumentality of J. C. Rowe and J. C. Meyer, of this place, and in which quite a number of Bellefonte people are stockholders.

That the Curwensville plant was a money maker was shown by the fact that after the old company went into the hands of a receiver, it was operated for five months under the management of a committee of experienced men and in that period cleared thirty-eight thousand dollars. With the new and improved machinery the Bickford company is installing the plant should prove a big money maker, a fact the stockholders will be glad to learn.

Pennsy To Make Automobiles.

Though not yet officially announced it is stated that the Pennsylvania railroad has had drawings made and arrangements are about completed for the making of automobiles in the Altoona shops. The machine will be used in cities instead of cabs for the train service of the Pennsylvania railroad. The building of the automobiles may be done at the Juniata shops as one department will be entirely devoted to their manufacture. They will be large handsome cars.

The Message Came A Few Hours Too Late.

Developments show that failure to receive a message from Sunbury led to a tragic suicide of Helen Bailey Trowbridge, an actress, in a Pittsburgh hotel on Saturday. Reduced to a penny and failing to receive the word that she could have all the money she needed the actress became despondent and took her life. Miss Trowbridge was signed to play character parts with the Western Murray and Markey company, which begins rehearsals at Butler, next week. While there she wired manager Murray, who is in Sunbury rehearsing his eastern company telling him her state of affairs.

Manager Murray without delay wired back telling her to telegraph the amount of money she needed and he would send it at once. This message was delivered at the hotel, but a few hours after she slashed her throat with a razor. Among the effects of the woman found in her room was a purse containing one penny, some theatrical papers and her name and address.

Corner Stone Laid.

The corner stone of the new Grace Lutheran church at State College was laid with impressive service Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. J. I. Stonecypher, of Boalsburg, the pastor in charge, preached the sermon, which proved to be a very able discourse. He was assisted in the service by Rev. C. T. Aikens, president of the Susquehanna University, and Rev. C. C. Snavely, of State College.

The successful progress so far made in the erection of this church is due in a large measure to the untiring efforts of the Ladies Circle of this congregation. The church is to be built with a limestone foundation and brick superstructure and will be a very pretty and attractive building when finished. It will be pushed to completion as fast as possible.

Young Contractors.

C. A. Thomas and Brothers of Bellefonte have embarked in the Lightning Rod business. They are just getting started and they need lots of encouragement in their work. The young men will take contracts both to put up new rods and repair old ones.

They are thoroughly reliable young fellows and we feel sure they will give the best satisfaction in their work. If you need any thing of this kind on your home or stable give them a chance at it, and do not send away off for some one who will not do the work half so well and give you no guarantee of satisfaction. We don't get a cent for what we have said, only we like to encourage young men who are doing an honest work.

Give them a chance and they will show you what they can do.

Belated Spring Kept Busy Honey Bee.

Apiarists in Centre county are very much concerned over the outlook for the crop of honey this year, as up to this time the bees have not gathered much more than half the supply they usually have stored at this time of year. The reason given is that as a result of the late spring there were not nearly so many blossoms on the fruit trees, while there were practically no clover blossoms.

A Child's Tribute to the Flag.

(Missa Irving in Leslie's Weekly.)
During graduating exercises at the Baron de Hirsch School in Philadelphia, one little girl kissed the flag, a touching tribute to her adopted country."—Daily Paper.

They marched along commencement day.
The children of the school.
The alien lads and lasses reared
'Neath freedom's gentle rule.
In muslin frocks and braided locks
They tripped with silver soles,
And in their midst with pride and joy
They bore the flag along.

But there was one, a little maid,
Who viewed with kindling eyes
The radiant red and starry blue
So like the morning skies.
Between her childish fingers, lo!
She raised the glowing bars,
And reverently with royal love
She kissed the stripes and stars.

Her fathers felt the Tyrant's yoke
And feared the tyrant's power,
And well she knew how great a gift
Is freedom's sacred dower.
The folds to which her rosy lips
So tenderly she prest
To her were symbols bright and true
Of all she loved the best.

Oh, many a time that flag has claimed
The life-blood of the brave,
And many a hero's soul has sped
That still its stars might wave.
But never higher tribute yet
Was added to its story
Than when the little maiden kissed
The colors of Old Glory.

Cutting Oats.

The wind is now blowing over the oats stubbles and the summer season is rapidly drifting towards fall. While active work on harvesting the oats crop generally will not be begun until next week, several farmers in Nitany valley cut their oats last week.

—An Indiana traveling man told a story the other day of an incident on the road. He was in the smoking car of an express train reading his paper when a man rushed in from the car behind the smoker, evidently in great agitation, and said: "Has anybody in this car any whiskey? A woman in the car behind has fainted!" Instantly dozens of flasks were produced. The man who had asked for it picked out the largest one, drew the cork, and put the bottle to his lips. With a long, satisfied sigh, he handed the flask back and remarked: "That did me a lot of good. I needed it, for it always makes me feel queer to see a woman faint away!"

A Big Trout.

The largest trout ever taken from Fishing creek was captured by Dorlin Hees, a member of the Bloomsburg State Normal School base ball team. The monster weighed 6 pounds and 15 ounces, and was 27 inches in length. He still has the fish and many of the oldest fish-men state that this is the largest trout that they have ever heard being taken from the stream, even in the days when it was nothing to take 100 fine trout in a couple of hours.

Take care of the stomach and the health will take care of itself.

If people only realized the soundness of that statement the majority might live to a good old age like Moses, "the eye undimmed, the natural force unabated." It is in the stomach that the blood is made. It is from the stomach that nourishment is dispensed to nerve and muscle. If the stomach is "weak" it can't do its whole work for each part of the body. If it is diseased the disease will in time nourishment which is distributed, and so spread disease throughout the body. It was the realization of the importance of the stomach as the very centre of health and the common source of disease, which led Dr. Pierce to prepare his "Golden Medical Discovery." "Diseases which originate in the stomach must be cured through the stomach." The soundness of this theory is proved every day by cures of diseased organs, heart, liver, lungs, blood, —by the use of the "Discovery" which is solely and singly a medicine for the blood and organs of digestion add nutrition.

Not a secret or "patent medicine" because ingredients are printed on the label; contains no alcohol, is purely vegetable.

"RED DWARF INK PENCIL" uses ordinary ink, makes carbon copies, don't leak. Doctors, Salesmen, Agents, Merchants, Lodge Secretaries, send $1.20 for re-usable sample Agents wanted. S. O. Singer, 335 5th Ave. Pittsburg, Pa. Rep-t. July 25.

If the Elks do buy this old home they will remodel the building from top to bottom. BOSTON'S CHINATOWN

The Scene of a Deadly Battle on Friday Night.

BETWEEN CHINAMEN

Revolvers Were Drawn and Three Were Killed and Several Wounded—Was war Between Factions.

TROUBLE HAD BEEN ANTICIPATED

Boston, August 2.—Burling with hatred for their deadly enemies belonging to the rival On Leong Tong society, a band of New York Chinamen numbering a dozen or more and said to be members of the notorious Hop Sing Tong organization, entered a narrow alley in Chinatown tonight and drawing revolvers opened fire upon half a hundred Chinamen, killing three and injuring seven. At the first volley the Chinamen rushed for their quarters, stumbling over one another in their haste to reach shelter. The Hop Sing Tong men chased their victims into their own doorways and shot them down as they rushed upstairs or into side rooms. Then casting away their guns the strange visitors ran from the Chinese quarter, most of them escaping the police.

The dead:

Wong Su Jung, aged 50, restaurant proprietor of Chinatown.

Chin Let, aged 35, laundryman, South End.

Chin Mon Quin, aged 48, merchant, Chinatown.

Of the injured, Lee Kai, aged 29; Shang Gu, aged 28, and Jong Con probably were fatally injured. The others are in a serious condition.

Immediately after the shooting one of the Hop Sing Tong men, from New York, was captured by a policeman as he was running away. The man gave the name of Nim Sing. He was dressed in American clothes. Later an officer at the South station took into custody Hong Woon, aged 34, of New York, whose hands were powder stained. Both prisoners were charged with manslaughter.

The police placed under arrest on suspicion seven other Chinamen who are strangers in the local colony.

The shooting occurred in Oxford Place, in the centre of Chinatown, where about fifty Chinamen were smoking in the open air.

Fifty shots were fired. That the visitors shot with careful accuracy was apparent from the fact that each of the three men killed was shot through the heart.

The trouble of to-night has been anticipated for more than a week. About ten days ago nearly a dozen Chinamen, who were all strangers, came to Boston and rented rooms near Chinatown. The police were notified of the fact by Boston Chinamen, who feared trouble. Special details of police were at once placed on duty in the Chinese quarter and the strangers suddenly disappeared.

The trouble is attributed to some shooting which occurred in Philadelphia recently, for which it is said Boston Chinamen were partially blamed. It is thought the Chinamen who did the shooting tonight came from New York to punish the On Leong Tong for the Philadelphia outbreak.

A FEW CAMP NOTES.

The Boys Maintained their High Rating While at Camp.

Now that the soldiers encampment is over and the most of us have gotten down to our different work, we look back to the happy days spent on the camp grounds among our comrades in blue.

Many things of a complimentary nature could be said of almost every man who went from Bellefonte, for every one performed his duty as good soldiers do. You hear so many nice things said while in camp and at home about the fellows who wear the shoulder straps and the ones who wear the chevrons, but it seems so strange you hardly ever hear the privates names mentioned and what they did. If you ever belonged to a military organization and had the honor to be a Private in the rear rank, don't your position appear small beside that of some high ranking officer? But its the boys who wear just the plain blue coat and trousers who the Generals and Colonels depend on, it is the privates in the ranks who do the work. They dig the ditches, cover up the sinks, police the company streets, walk their post on guard, drink all the beer in camp and miss roll call. They are the boys who can eat the regular rations issued by the Commissary and when it is necessary raise a great old kick when the cooks want to mix potatoes, onions, rice and prunes together just for an odd dish, they are the boys who can live just as happy on what the government issues, and let the non coms eat the stuffed olives and the Boston baked beans and other dainties bought with the company's money. Of course the privates couldn't stand any of these dainties as it would cause stomach trouble. But say—the privates were right there with the goods when inspection day arrived. The Company had fallen in (not the mud) a half a dozen times to be inspected and every time it would start to rain. Every man's Krag was polished and shone like a diamond and every man did his utmost to have the best gun, but the little drops of water soon fixed the brightness. So the boys were called out again, this time every man was on his mettle, he was mad, very mad, and out they marched to the field, not a man lost a step—hep-hep-hep and when the command was given squads left—balt it was like clock work. Better, really than a company from the regulars could have done. The inspection only lasted a few minutes and the men were sent back to their tents, feeling that they had done their best to keep the good rating they have always maintained.

The following is a clipping from an Altoona paper and is certainly a compliment to the boys:

The swiftest looking company to report for provost duty to Major Aiken up to date, was Company B of the Fifth Colonel Taylor's old command. Led by Colonel Taylor's crack bugle corps, under command of Captain Garbrick, with swinging step, went marching down to the little station at Tipton at 8 o'clock, looking like a company of regulars. In their dinky khaki uniforms every man, looked and acted like a real soldier. Colonel Taylor personally saw to it that they were in the finest condition possible before they left the regimental camp.

Of Interest To Women.

To such women as are not seriously out of health, but who have exacting duties to perform either in the way of household care or in social duties and functions, which seriously tax their strength, as mothers nursing mothers, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has proved a most valuable supporting tonic and invigorating service. By its timely use, much sickness and suffering may be avoided. The operating table and the surgeon's knife would be a relief to whom have to be employed if this most valuable woman's remedy were resorted to in good time. The Favorite Prescription has proven a great boon to expectant mothers by preparing the system for the coming of baby, thereby rendering childbirth safe, easy, and almost painless.

Bear in mind, please that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse, because of the uncertainty as to their composition and harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its make-up. In this connection it may not be out of place to state that the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce is the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, and sold through druggists, all the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of these endorsements will be sent to any address, post-paid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card, or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Odd Pair of Boots.

"Why, John, what a stupid action this is," said a captain of the horse to his servant. "You have brought me a pair of boots that do not match. One has a high top and the other a low one."

"I have been wondering about that myself, and I don't understand it," said the man, "but the most curious part of it is that on the shoe box stands another pair just like this one."

IS IT TRUE?

Is it true, O Christ in heaven, That the highest suffer most? That the strongest wander farthest And more hopelessly are lost? That the mark of rank in nature Is capacity for pain? And the anguish of the singer Make the sweetness of the strain?

Is it true, O Christ in heaven, That the fullness yet to come Is so glorious and so perfect That to know would strike us dumb? That if even for a moment We could peer beyond the sky With these poor, dim eyes of mortals We should just see God and die?

Generous. "Tommy, did you give your brother the best part of the apple, as I told you to?" Tommy—Yessum; I gave him the seeds. He can plant 'em and have a whole orchard.—Ladies' Home Journal.

As Children See Things.

A Canadian school principal, Miss

Anges Cameron, in the Century tells of a boy who wrote:

"When a gentleman walks with a lady on the public street, no gentleman walks inside the lady."

To the question, "What is dew?" another child answered: "The earth revolves on its own axis 365 times in twenty-four hours. This rapid motion through space causes its sides to perspire; this is called dew."

In a geography class I asked: "Tom, your father is a sailor. Would it be possible for him to start today to go round the world and keep on sailing always in the same direction till he came back to his starting point?"

"No, Miss Cameron."

"Why?"

"He's in jail."

It was a little girl whose imagination took the bit in its teeth with this audacious run across country: "Elizabeth is well known in literature. She patronized Shakespeare and encouraged Sidney. She was dearly fond of hawks and horses and hounds, chivalry and cavalry and other animals of the chase. In glory and honor and majesty we see her strut in her German garden. Raleigh set his cloak for her, but Elizabeth fondly died a maiden queen."

Home, Sweet Home.

The wife of a naval officer attached to the academy at Annapolis has in her employ an Irish servant who recently gave evidence of homesickness. "You ought to be contented and not pine for your old home, Bridget," said the lady of the house. "You are earning good wages, your work is light, every one is kind to you, and you have lots of friends here."

"Yis, mum," sadly replied Bridget; "but it's not the place where I be that makes me homesick; it is the place where I don't be."—Lippincott's.

The Pride of a Governor.

"Out in my state," says a Missouri congressman, "we used to have a governor by the name of Stewart. This was way back when I was a boy. They tell how Stewart, among others, was once entertaining the Prince of Wales on the occasion many years ago when he visited this country. They gave a great ball in St. Louis in the prince's honor. Stewart came down from Jefferson City to do credit to it. He and the prince were stationed on a little platform raised for them at one side of the hall. So stationed the beauty and brilliancy and the blue blood of St. Louis swept by them in dazzling review. The spectacle elevated Stewart's feelings several notches. His bosom swelled. Finally in a tremendous impulse born of glow and glory, he administered a mighty slap to the royal back and exclaimed:

"Prince, don't you wish you were governor of Missouri?"

Courageous For His Wife.

A farmer went into the office of a Bluffford (Me.) dentist the other day and inquired what the charge was for pulling a tooth.

"Twenty-five cents without gas and fifty cents if you take gas," replied the dentist.

"I don't want any gas," said the farmer.

"I admire your courage," replied the dentist. "Most people want to take gas."

"Oh, it isn't me; it's my wife that's going to have the tooth out," explained the farmer.

The Shrewd Poodle.

In 1780 the daughter of an army officer from Coburg wrote to Haydn of a little adventure, asking him to set it to music. This is the story: She and her intended husband, a captain of the army, together with a friend and a poodle, were taking a walk. The captain had been seeing his dog's talents, and made a bet with his friend that the dog would find a thaler laid under a bush now, he being sent back for it after their return home. The bet was accepted. Directly after returning home the captain sent his dog back for the money.

Now it so happened that a traveling tailor sat down to rest under that very bush where the thaler was deposited. The man, highly pleased at having found a thaler and such an amiable dog within an hour, took him to his stopping place in town. The poodle watched the tailor's clothes all night and when, early the next morning, the door of the room was opened, he stole out, carrying the tailor's trousers with him and brought both them and the thaler to his master.

This little adventure had been put into verse under the title, "The Cunning and Serviceable Poodle," and Haydn put the text to music.

Gladstone's Ruse.

Mr. Gladstone was once guilty of deliberately evading an international regulation at the Franco-Italian frontier. He was carrying for his refreshment a basket of fine grapes, which stringent regulations at the time forbade being taken from one country to the other, on account of phylloxera, an insect that attacks the roots and leaves of the grape vines.

Mr. Gladstone's great brain reviewed the situation; he must obey the law, but he was determined to have the grapes, so he sat down then and there on the railway station bench and ate them.

Committed to Hoke Smith.

"I remember so well once when Joe Blackburn and I were on the same committee," said Senator P. "It was during a Democratic administration and there had been a good deal of bother trying to get the secretary of agriculture to agree to a certain thing, and Blackburn had been sent to talk him over to the committee's plan. In fact, the whole cabinet had been difficult to deal with. When Joe came back several of us were assembled in the committee room, among us Senator Vest, who was sunk dejectedly into the depths of an armchair. Some one asked:

"Well, Joe, did you succeed?"

"Succeeded?" he echoed. Then he began to tramp up and down, fuming and fussing. Finally he broke out:

"Of all the obstinate things in the shape of a cabinet officer I ever encountered, commend me to J. Sterling Morton! Don't you agree with me, Vest?"

"Vest roused up slowly and answered:

"I'm sorry, Joe, but I am committed to Hoke Smith."

A Double Penalty.

An officer came to report to General Wrangel. The general noticed that the officer's spurs were not those prescribed by regulations. He took him to task about it and gave him twenty-four hours' house arrest. The officer, seeing that Wrangel wore the same spurs, made a remark about it.

"Very well, my son," said the general, "then you stay another twenty-four hours for me!"

Too Hungry For Speeches.

Frederick William IV., later Emperor William I., never liked to listen to long speeches when he was received into a city. One day after having traveled for many hours in a post chaise, he reached the gates of a small town about noon, tired and hungry. Here the king was received by the officials, and the burgomaster began a long winded speech with:

"Most high and most gracious king! When Hannibal stood before the gates of Carthage—"

"He was probably as hungry as I am. Come, my dear burgomaster, get into my carriage and be my guest."

The Shah at Newgate.

While the shah of Persia was on a visit to England he wanted to see how the English executed their criminals. The sight of torture is a favorite entertainment of eastern monarchs. Accompanied by a numerous suit, he went to Newgate. Great was his disappointment upon hearing that the rope caused almost instantaneous death. However, he decided upon seeing how the apparatus worked, and desired the governor of the prison to be good enough to execute a prisoner on the spot. It was represented to him that there were no criminals under sentence of death just then. He was about to lose his temper when, recollecting himself, he cried: "That's no objection. I will let you have one of my suit."

Kentucky Pride.

Two passengers were sitting in a smoking compartment of a train crossing the Ohio river at Louisville. "Are you from Indiana, sir?" inquired one. "Hell, no! I'm a Kentuckian," the other replied indignantly and added after some meditation, "I've been sick; that's what's the matter with me!"

He Kept Cool.

A man and his wife were once staying at a hotel, when in the night they were aroused from their slumbers by the cry that the hotel was afire.

"Now, my dear," said the husband, "I will put into practice what I have preached. Put on all your indispensable apparel and keep cool."

Then he slipped his watch into his vest pocket and walked with his wife out of the hotel.

When all danger was past he said, "Now you see how necessary it is to keep cool."

The wife for the first time glanced at her husband.

"Yes, William," she said, "it is a grand thing, but if I were you I would have put on my trousers."—Boston Herald.

—Carp are seriously plenty and large in the Bald Eagle, and are thinning out other fish to some extent. How to get rid of these fish is a problem that puzzles our fish and authorities as well as the fishing fraternity. Carp get large enough in our local streams to weigh anywhere from 10 to 20 pounds. The carp prey upon the spawn of all other fish.
—William Grove, son of Nathan Grove of Lemont, and Miss Ella Witmer, daughter of John B. Witmer, of Pine Grove Mills, slipped away to Watontown on July 24 and were quietly married. —About thirty of their friends gave Mr. and Mrs. John Lambert, of Quaker Hill, the biggest surprise in their life on Wednesday evening when they gathered at their home to help them celebrate their birthdays, it being both their anniversaries. Neither one had the least idea that there was anything doing and when the crowd swooped down upon them they were almost rendered speechless. Of course, it finally proved a very jolly evening for all. There were choice refreshments and everything to make the time pass very pleasantly. Mr. and Mrs. Lambert were the recipient of quite a lot of very useful remembrances.
—About a week ago word was received in Bellefonte that "Bucky" Bathurst, who three years ago was implicated in breaking into the Bosh house bar-room and stealing a quantity of liquor, was out in the vicinity of Pittsburgh. Armed with a warrant for his arrest sheriff Kline went out and had no trouble locating him in a town about thirty miles north of the Smoky city. When told that he was wanted "Bucky" made no resistance, though he deplored the fact that he would be compelled to stand trial and suffer the consequences of his crime. He was brought to Bellefonte and placed in jail, being unable up to this writing to get anybody to go on his bail bond. For the past year or so Bathurst has been working on the railroad and had a good job, making from eighty to one hundred dollars a month, and was well liked by the employers and co-laborers.

—A drain of some kind should be placed in the school commons, as every time it rains a deep ditch is washed from one corner to the other. This should be attended to.

He says he expects great accolades for his professional pitching on Friday. He and his son are out back of the store every day practicing for the great game. He says the business men must win this game.
—Squire H. Laird Curtin has this week been entertaining his fraternity brother, Charles Gosenhoffer, of New York city, and as they were all at Trinity college at the same time Hugh Crider is helping the Squire make it pleasant for him. Just to show the young New Yorker what kind of a meal they serve in Pennsylvania Squire Curtin entertained an automobile stag party at the Old Fort on Monday evening at which Mr. Gosenhoffer, Charles Clement, of Sunbury, Wilson Gephart, J. H. Robb, Maurice Jackson, Hugh Crider and himself were present and everyone unanimously agreed that landlord Edward Royer did not miss putting on the table one thing that was eatable. From the Old Fort the party went to Spring Mills to see landlord Warren Wood only to learn that he was attending camp meeting or something else at Ocean Grove. They next visited Penn Cave and took a night trip through that subterranean cavern, finally landing in Bellefonte at 10:30 o'clock the same evening.

—The new state road that R. B. Taylor and his large crew of men are building between Bellefonte and Milesburg will be completed in about 5 weeks. It is said to be the best road of its kind laid in this portion of the state.
—The fall term of State Normal School begins Sept. 9th, and the increased applications for rooms indicate that its well merited distinction as a school is becoming more widely recognized. Write for its catalogue of 140 pages.
—The Theatrical in the Petrikin Hall is drawing larger audiences each evening. It is patronized by some of our best people and is certainly a pleasant place to go and spend a half hour, listen to and see the illustrated songs and moving pictures.
—The usual gang of girl loafers and street trouters saw that the train arrived in Bellefonte Saturday evening. It would be an excellent idea to have some of them pulled in, and that is what the P. R. R. Co. will do. What a nice spicy story it would make.
—The P. R. R. Co. have decided to place a tower house near the station. They first intended to only have signals but as the signals could not be seen from the ticket office window, they decided the safest plan would be to have the tower. Don't know whether Barkie will make his home there or not.
—The Mason's Camp opens Monday near Curtin in their fine cabin and there will be a good many of the Masons represented all this week and next at that beautiful spot. —The Patrons of Husbandry will hold a benefit on Saturday Aug. 10, in the hall at Fine Hall, when the Keystone Concert Company will introduce their latest songs, monologues and sketches violin, cornet and Xephone solos, conversational duets etc. A large audience is expected as this company's success is largely known through out the valley.
—Just think the murder of Josiah Dale was committed the 12th of last November, and the person or persons who committed this awful crime have not been captured. Indeed it seems as though the case has entirely dropped and that no one will have to answer for this man's death. No effort is being made as all to locate the criminals. Is Dale's death to go unpunished?
—An inconceivable light is badly needed at the opening of Pike Alley on Spring St. near Valentine's stable. At night it is so dark that people passing there stumble and fall. And then it is not safe for ladies to pass by at this point as a great many men gather at this dark place to drink their booze. Only last Saturday evening a lady was passing by a dark place like this in Sunbury and she was knocked down and criminally assaulted. The council should look after this matter.
—Suppose a Donahoe should walk into Bellefonte the same as he did into Philadelphia, don't suppose he would find quite so many crooks and grafters, but no doubt he could locate a few. We had a specimen of the Philadelphia Detective work here in this county when a force of these sleuths were employed to hunt down the Kachic and the Dale murderers, but they failed in great old style. Now the tax payers must put up the dough to pay these fellows for something they did not do.
—Centre county farmers are boasting of the grain and hay crops they harvested, but it remained for Captain W. C. Patterson, farm superintendent of the Pennsylvania State College Experimental Station, not only to produce the largest crop of hay from a given number of acres, but so far as there is any record, the largest yield ever known on the experimental farm. At one cutting 36 large loads of timothy hay were harvested from six measured acres. Several loads each weighed over one ton. A representative acre weighed separately indicated a yield of five tons and 189 pounds to the acre or a total yield on the six acres of 30 tons and 1134 pounds.
